

Hello to all of my Enigma World Code Group friends,

In 1945, German U-boats were using a breathing device called a Schnorkel (snorkel) that allowed them to remain under water while running on their powerful diesel engines, re-charging their batteries, and taking-in fresh air. The waters off the southern coast of Ireland were particularly well suited for Schnorkel-equipped U-boat operations against allied convoys. This area was an excellent candidate for an allied minefield, except that no minelaying vessels were available. British Intelligence and the Enigma code breakers at Bletchley Park had the answer.

Let's use my U-571 codesheets, March 30, 1944, with Kengruppen. See October, 2013, codesheet on how to use Auto Typing and save gobs of time!
